London-based Suna Interior Design Ltd has been nominated as finalists in both the Bathroom Contract Designer of the Year and Kitchen Contract Designer of the Year categories at the prestigious national awards, organised by kbbreview magazine.

Rebecca Tucker, Co-Director of Suna Interior Design Ltd, said: "We're delighted to be a finalists in the kbbreview Awards again this year, it's a testament to all the hard work and dedication that we put into each project and the quality of work we produce."

Helen Fewster, Co-Director at Suna Interior Design Ltd, said: "This year we're finalists in two categories: Kitchen Contract Designer of the Year and Bathroom Contract Designer of the Year. We have had great success at these awards in the past and we are very proud of that achievement. We will be keeping our fingers crossed that we are able to continue that success at the forthcoming awards night!"

Tim Wallace, editor of kbbreview said: "This year marks a landmark 20 years of the biggest awards event in the industry, and we're delighted to have kicked off the celebrations accordingly with a record number of entries.

"As always the standard of submissions has been incredibly high and the judging process, already renowned for its rigor, has been revised to reflect this. As such, we would like to extend our special congratulations to Helen and Rebecca on being nominated as finalists in their categories, and wish them the very best of luck."

"The bathroom design was for a development in East London – The Orchard for Mount Anvil" said Helen and Rebecca. "The brief was to develop specification that related to the 'creative' market that live and work in Clerkenwell. The development was to stand out as an alternative product to what was available in the area already. As the development is twenty-eight apartments in total it was felt that the design could be unique, with a more bespoke and individual approach."

"The kitchen design was for a development in the Clerkenwell Quarter in London, with the brief being to design all of the interior specification that was then laid out over the 107 apartments in the development. This design was to be a clever combination of contemporary and unique. We used bespoke gloss cabinetry in combination with warm wood tones to create a sleek and stylish kitchen that is both functional and aesthetically pleasing."

The winners will be announced by the traditional opening of an envelope at the glittering, black tie gala dinner taking place on Tuesday 4th March 2014 at the Hilton Birmingham Metropole.
