EXPERT: CHOOSE FOCAL WALL AND COLOUR IN SMALL ROOMS

28th September 2012

There are many things to remember when decorating. In fact, it can be difficult to even learn all the information and tips that are available on the subject:

But when it comes to doing up smaller rooms, one expert has stepped in to provide precise advice that should help everybody. Rebecca Tucker, director of Sunainteriodesign.com, explained her belief that one of the biggest mistakes is having a dark colour on all four walls.

Instead, people should select a focal wall and choose a feature colour for it. This will ensure the overall balance of the space is just right.

"Consider all the other walls too and don't just opt for white, but take the tone of the feature wall down a couple of notches for a more cohesive look," Ms Tucker explained.

She went on to note that it is also important to get the choice of furniture right, stating: "Whatever you do in a small space, do not choose small-scale furniture, it will make your room look like a dolls house and anyone entering it will feel oversized and massive in scale next to it."

But ultimately, there is only so much that can be done with colours and furniture. People also need other features that will ensure they are blessed with a creative and stylish room that remains in fashion for many years to come.

One good option is engineered flooring, which can be laid in almost any space, no matter how large or small. Its rich tones make it the ideal aesthetic installation, while its immense practicality will not have been lost on many individuals.

Wood is incredibly strong and resistant, making it an ideal solution in the home, where wear and tear is likely. Having it fitted could just be the most significant step anybody will make towards a high-class, attractive room.
